REGIONAL GOVERNOR CONFERENCE

DEVELOPING SCHOOLS DEVELOPING PEOPLE

The strategic importance of professional development

Saturday 14th June 2008

10.00am – 4.00pm : £25

BioCity, Nottingham

Keynote: Professor Chris Day

This conference is for school governors from across the East Midlands who wish to explore the growing importance of well-led continuing professional development (CPD) within schools. Themes will include:

- . CPD and self evaluation/Ofsted
- . CPD and performance management
- . CPD and the wider school workforce
- . CPD and succession planning for school leadership

This conference blends stimulating presentation and 'practitioner-led' workshops to provide a day of reflection on how governors can fulfil an effective strategic role.

Christopher Day is Professor of Education and Co-director of the Centre for Research on Teacher and School Development at the School of Education, University of Nottingham. He has worked as a school teacher, teacher educator and local authority adviser. He has extensive research and consultancy experience in England, Europe, Australia, South East Asia, and America in the fields of teachers' continuing professional development, action research, leadership and change.
